HISTORY

After a centuries long war between angels and demons, their numbers were reduced to less than one hundred. They eventually came to various agreements try and achieve peace and not drive their own extinction. One of these agreements was the divide of the country. This was also when the pet and draft system (including the magical orb that is responsible for it) was created.

POPULATION

The population in Inferna is still not very big, they are just very well spread out. It's not exactly common to see extremely crowded streets or places. It has not been that long after the war and, even though people seem to have plenty of kids, it's not enough to truly fill such a big piece of land yet.

BORDER

There is nothing at the border but the draft orb and its maintenance personnel. The rest is guarded by powerful magical barriers. There is also the crossing points that are guarded by people. It's not hard to cross nowadays, they just want to make sure no pets or pets-to-be escape to either side.

LIVING ARRANGEMENTS

Nowadays, it's not super uncommon for demons to live in the south or angels in the north. Yes, it's still considered unusual, but it does happen. It's been a slow progress, but houses and facilities are becoming more accommodating to each other's sizes in each place, so living together becomes easier. The previous war tensions being slowly left behind also helps.

SOUTH INFERNAL [ANGELS]

It's divided by horizontal districts and they themselves are divided into outer and inner town. The outer town is where most things are and anyone can visit, including demons and pets! You can also have a house there provided you don't have kids or are a demon.

The inner town has some basic facilities for living, but it's mostly just a place where draft-age angels and pre draft-age angels live. Only them and their immediate family are allowed to live there or go inside at all. The angels who have not yet become full citizens are not allowed to leave the inner town.

Their climate is a little bit colder than the north. They have a clearer distinction between winter and summer, but it still doesn't snow or anything (save for some mountains in the extreme south)

They are responsible for pet collecting after each draft and the initial pet processing facility is on their side of the border. There, they prepare the pets-to-be to be sent to the market on the other side of the border.

NORTH INFERNAL [DEMONS]

It's also divided by districts, but they follow the natural landscape a bit better and more organically. Pets can roam mostly free (beside their owners, of course), but it's agreed upon that children and pets should not interact, so demons are raised not in their home, but in a different facility where they have official caretakers alongside their parents. There is, of course, a minimum amount of time you are required to spend with your children there (or you will be charged for child neglect), but most responsible parents go way over the minimum. Pets are obviously not allowed in, neither is anyone who is not either an employee or a parent with children currently there (due to this, most angels aren't allowed either)

You can actually go on foot to the child-raising facility closer to your home because the city is very well projected. This is the same for most basic living necessities like hospitals, markets and parks. Some people do own cars but only if they travel a lot, otherwise they aren't really needed.

There are also plenty of PRP stations, they are in a fixed location to make it easier to build maintenance buildings around it. Also to make the working personnel lives easier.
