I once fell in love with a girl who was both lovely and pretty, but she wasn't up to standards when it came to her being "wife material". In fact, she was so far gone she truly believed she was a man. Seeing her go down this path physically hurt me, as I loved her too much to just let destroy herself like that.

Lesser men would have let the whole thing go, leaving her to whatever horrible fate the path the following would lead. But not I, no. I truly loved that girl and I knew I was the only one who could save her, so I took it upon myself to mold her into a perfect wife and ideal woman.

I knew she would hate me for it at first, women rarely know what is best for themselves, but with those that have been tainted by feminism or the gender cult, it's even worse. Her cruel words and defiant looks stung, I won't lie, but my mind was focused on the future we would soon build together.

Just like I had predicted, she is not only thankful that I interfered when I did, but also ashamed of how she acted.

It took just over a couple of years of proper re-education for that girl I had fallen in love with to finally turn into a perfect wife, an amazing mother and a role model of a woman.

And I have proof of that, in the form of plenty of pictures I have taken of my dear wife during this time!

Here are some of the lessons Soleil has learned during this process of re-learning her place!

All of her "personal" choices are made with her husband's opinion in mind.

She knows her breasts must always be either fully exposed or, at least, covered as little as possible.

I let her cover up a bit more if she's with the kids.

This rule is especially useful for girls who really hate her breasts, like Soleil. I'm sure this is what really cured her!

She chooses clothes that highlights her feminine features.

Sol used to be quite shy and not want to walk around the house with such revealing clothes, but now she does because she know it makes her husband happy!

Soleil also works out and takes care of her eating habits in order to maintain a figure that I find most pleasing.

She never looks disheveled, even if her husband isn't there.

She always wears make-up and looks pretty.

Soleil is not a big fan of it, but since I think she looks prettier like that, she happily obliges.

Lesson learned: She must always look her best, trying her hardest to adhere to her husband's preferences regarding her appearance and general presentation.
