This is Leilei's first day serving as a Public Relief Pet. He has been assigned the role of urinal.

Pet angels usually have a single owner, but those who are not bought end up becoming property of the Inferna state. They are then assigned a role, all serving the public in some way. They can end up becoming regular public sexual relief tools, milk pets, aid in research and education and more. Their bodies are very useful and we as a society need them to function!

The urinal role, the one assigned to Leilei, is a very intense post to fill and can be quite hard on the pet, not only due to the mandatory amputations (for easier managing), but also because users tend to be much rougher with urinals.

It's not common to assign brand-new pets to this type of role.

However, due to this one's extremely high self-healing and regeneration abilities, he was deemed fit to occupy this role despite his lack of experience.

Although it was a controversial choice, ultimately, the chance of permanent destruction of this government property is quite low when compared to the potential benefits.

Because of the nature of the "job", most pets don't last long in their post, either dying or breaking mentally, so the state is always in dire need of new urinal pets.

Although I'm an official pet trainer for the state, I'm not used to training urinal pets. But I'm good at dealing with outliers apparently, so his training and adaptation fell to me.
